most significant additional measures that the government took under the Act.

I certainly hope that we'll see an early, non-violent end to the blockades although I am worried, as I know you are.

There are also lots of long-term issues we need to consider once this is over, including whether we need to take other measures that could obviate the need to use the extraordinary powers in the Act in the future, and how to repair holes in our political system. I am particularly concerned about the radicalization of people who would normally be law-abiding and focused on going about their daily lives.

Glad to talk at any time.
